Vernon Memorial Unveiled

VERNON, B.C., Nov. 9.—Unveiling and dedication of a cenotaph to the memory of the 124 Vernon men killed overseas in the World War took place here yesterday afternoon in the presence of a large gathering of citizens. The open air ceremonies were followed by an indoor service.

Poppy Sale Grows In Irish Capital

Armistice Appeal to Raise $50,000 This Year, War Leader Hopes

DUBLIN, Nov. 9.—Three years ago in Dublin the sale of poppies for Armistice Day amounted to only £50. Last year £4,000 was realized, and Sir Wm. Hickie, who commanded the Irish Division in the Great War, hopes this year will reach £10,000. The money is to be used to relieve the necessities of ex-service men, of whom there are 3,000 unemployed in Dublin.

Last year the demonstration on Armistice Day was held in the centre of the city and brought out tens of thousands of persons, who crowded the streets all day, seriously distracting traffic.

Delegations of ex-service men from the Free State will lay wreaths on the cenotaph in London and Belfast.

Alaskan Wins Long Struggle For Freedom

Prisoner Regains Liberty After Twenty-One Years' Imprisonment — Four Years in Dungeon

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Nov. 9.—Vuko Perovich, who for four years crouched in an Alaskan dungeon, expecting daily to be led away to death, will be a free man today. He will be released from the federal penitentiary, where he has been since 1902, on a writ of habeas corpus granted by Federal Judge John C. Pollock.

Perovich was convicted of the murder of a prospector in the Alaskan goldfields in 1904. Three men gave testimony against him and charred bones from a burned cabin were displayed as evidence. He was sentenced to death.

In those days it was necessary for the President to sign the death warrant. President Roosevelt went out of office without signing it. For four years Perovich, a man six feet tall, was confined in a dungeon four feet wide, ten feet long and five feet high. A United States marshal was indicted for the cruel treatment.

Then in 1909 President Taft commuted the sentence to life imprisonment and Perovich was brought to the federal prison here. The writ was issued by Judge Pollock on Perovich's contention that in 1909 President Taft did not have the power to change the sentence. The witnesses who testified against him, he declared, were men with whom he had fought over a claim. Perovich asserts that they "framed" the charge. There never was any actual proof the prospector had been killed, Perovich said, claiming the bones brought to court were those of a dog.

horrors of the Great War should be forgotten, but that the lessons of those great days should live forever in the minds of all peoples.

Before Major White pronounced the benediction a silver collection was taken up and the following hymn, written by Mrs. Mary J. Barron, wife of a local veteran of the Great War, was sung:

The Silent Tribute

Though brief the time with bending head,

Dream visions pass with martial tread,

Of legions answering to the call,

Brave hearts that stayed a nation's fall.

We see again the battle's grime,

In this short interval of time.

Our thoughts are borne to scattered graves

'Neath grassy mounds and rolling waves.

We look across the bridge of pain,

And see their pleasant smiles again.

They're only crossed, like millions more,

And wait us at the open door.

Before Thee, God, we humbly stand,

In tribute to that gallant band

Of soldiers, sailors, nurses, all

Who gave their lives at country's call.

And now our prayers rise up to Thee,

In reverence of their memory.

G.W.V.A. Parade

NANAIMO, Nov. 9.—Services were held at the war memorial, Sunday afternoon, for departed heroes of the World War. Led by the Silver Cord Band and followed by the Girl Guides, local Great War veterans marched to the cenotaph, where hundreds of citizens took part in the singing and prayer.

At St. John's

LADYSMITH, Nov. 9.—A good attendance of the Army and Navy Club paraded to St. John's Church to attend divine service, Sunday evening. The Rev. Edwin Moss, who officiated, gave a most edifying address.

At Ladysmith

LADYSMITH, Nov. 9.—Wednesday, Armistice Day, a memorial service will be solemnized at the monument, First Avenue, at 10:45 a.m. The veterans will attend and a large assembly is expected. At 11 a.m., Comrade Felle will sound "The Last Post," and two minutes' silence will be observed.

Service at Courtenay

COURTENAY, Nov. 9.—Not quite so much interest was noticeable in the Armistice Day celebrations which were observed here today, as compared with previous years. Showers of rain fell during the morning, and it was decided to hold the memorial service in the Agricultural Hall instead of at the cenotaph at Sandwick, as had been usual on former occasions. Scouts, Guides and Brownies all turned out in uniform to honor the memory of those that paid the supreme penalty in the greatest war, that terminated seven years ago. Besides the ex-service men and the junior organizations, a fair number of the public attended the service, which was conducted by four clergymen of the district. Rev. J. W. Plinton an-

Prince of Wales' Christmas Card

—Painted by Howard Davis

SIR HUMPHREY GILBERT, step-brother of Sir Walter Raleigh and one of the ablest navigators of his day, landed at the harbor of St. John's, Newfoundland, on August 6, 1583, thereby founding the first British colony, this, the oldest Dominion of the British Empire, having been discovered by John Cabot in June, 1497. (The Royal Christmas card is reproduced by the courtesy of Messrs. Raphael Tuck & Sons, Ltd., direct from the original Christmas cards produced by them for the King, the Queen and the Prince of Wales, who have graciously permitted to publish the cards.)

"O Canada" was sung. The Rev. E. M. Cook gave a splendid address, recalling vividly the early days of the war, and later the joy with which the news of peace was received. At the conclusion of the service the congregation assembled at the war memorial, where Rev. B. E. Spurling offered up a prayer, and the National Anthem was sung, several wreaths and flowers being placed on the memorial at this time.

An Important Discovery

The Vatican is the great palace in Rome in which the Pope lives. Not all of its many rooms are used, and it appears that one has remained closed for more than three hundred years. In A.D. 1583 the great sculptor and painter, Michael Angelo, was cut down before the great work of painting the ceiling of St. Peter's Cathedral was finished. When his last illness came he was preparing to finish the inside of the great dome.

A short time ago, someone found in an unused room in the Vatican a great bundle of what looked like dirty rags. When they were carefully opened out, they were found to be drawings made by Michael Angelo. These rough sketches were, it is believed, the portraits of four great men of that time, the painters Leonardo da Vinci and Titian; Vasari, an author and friend, and Michael Angelo himself. They were intended to represent prophets, of whom Isaiah was one. After all these years, these designs, fresh from the hand of the master, have come to light.

The great author, Romain Rolland, tells us of the time when these drawings were made: "After the death of Vittoria Colonna, his greatest friend, Michael Angelo's desire would have been to return to Florence, 'to lay his weary bones at rest by the side of his father.' But after having served the Pope all his life, he wished to devote his last years to the service of God."

On January 1, 1567, one month before the death of Vittoria Colonna, Michael Angelo had, in fact, been appointed architect of St. Peter's, with full powers to erect the building. It was not without difficulty that he could be got to accept the post, and it was not the earnest entreaties of the Pope which made him decide to take upon his aged shoulders the heaviest load he had yet borne. He saw in it a duty, a mission from God. "Many people (and I myself) think that I have been placed in this post by God," he wrote. "Old though I am, I do not wish to abandon it, for I serve through love of God and place all my hopes in Him."

He did not accept payment for this sacred task.

The fact that this is a very good study of Colonel Mitchell, the sternly petrel of the U.S. air force, with a group of young officers, is of secondary importance. Its chief interest to Canadians lies in the fact that the uniform of the American force is now almost an exact copy of that used in the Royal Air Force. It is interesting, too, to note that the faces of the officers are characteristic of half a dozen different races. There is no similarity of feature or expression which stamps them all as American. The U.S. army would seem to share the melting-pot traits of the country it serves. Colonel Mitchell is accused of charging criminal carelessness against the U.S. aviation authorities.

Big Congregation at Thanksgiving Service at St. Andrew's Yesterday

Rev. Dr. Sipprell Preaches Sermon, Indicating Some Causes for Gratitude—Rev. A. deB. Owen in Charge of Service in Which Other Pastors Participate

A big congregation attended at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church yesterday morning for the Thanksgiving service held under the united churches of the city, when the collection taken in aid of the Balaclava fund for children amounted to more than $30.

The Rev. A. deB. Owen, pastor of the Reformed Episcopal Church, directed the services, and the Rev. Dr. Sipprell, pastor of Metropolitan United Church, preached the sermon. Rev. R. W. Lee, of Fairfield Church; Rev. Smith Patterson, of Victoria West Church; Rev. Dr. Clay, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, also took part in the services, and other congregations which were represented were First United Church, Rev. Dr. W. G. Wilson; Knox Presbyterian Church, Rev. Dr. McCoy; Gorge Church, Rev. Daniel Walker.

"Let the peace of God rule in your hearts," was the subject of Dr. Sipprell's address, who said that the appointment of a day for universal thanksgiving was a good thing, but while it had its advantages, it also had its dangers. One of the greatest being that people might regard it as a formal and perfunctory thing rather than one perfectly spontaneous.

Gratitude is Due

Dr. Sipprell recited some of the occasions for thankfulness. Gratitude should find a place in everyone's thought at some time. And a reflection on the manifold mercies of God led to the further reflection as to what one had done to justify any claim on the Divine grace. Some of the spiritual and temporal gifts were enumerated: an inheritance of civil and religious liberty; happy homes; a country at peace; opportunity to live in a beautiful city and a beautiful world.

There were always the multifold commonplace mercies, too, for which all should be thankful. Dr. Sipprell would have mankind grateful, also, for its sense of imagination, the gift which had given Michelangelo, Corot, Brunelleschi, and others in the world of music, poetry, architecture, oratory; the gift which made it possible to see glory in the commonplace things of life.

Basils Must Be Spiritual

"There must be a spiritual and not a material basis for any inspiration which man is to have," continued the speaker. "Never had it been more difficult to direct men's minds. But the restlessness in the heart of man was a good sign, for in their search for rest they must turn into the right path. There is a profound conviction that Jesus must stand in the centre of all thought activity," affirmed the preacher.

Christianity must don a more practical form. Service is demanded as the chief note in Christian expression. In international affairs it was being realized that an open highway to the hearts of men could only be attained by bridging the chasms and removing the barriers which separate men from their fellows. Nationalism, nationalism, must be broken down. Religion and Christianity were not purely personal matters, but had to do with world affairs and international problems.

World Peace Advancing

Dr. Sipprell saw a very real cause for thankfulness in the sentiment toward world peace. As the result of the Locarno conference seven new treaties were to be signed on December 1, by the signatories of the original League of Nations. This was a said the preacher. When the Christian church began it was one church, but not until very recent years did the signs point toward that condition once more. The Lambeth conference and the conference at Stockholm were examples of the trend of the times toward unity.

Psalm 104 was the Lesson. The choir, led by Mr. Jesse Longfield, was a massed choir from the churches of the city sharing in the services.

With the membership of the House practically decided, it is now possible to judge how the rival forces will line up.

In reports furnished the public, the following have been included in the Liberal column:

R. W. Jacobs, Cartier; Henri Bourassa, Labelle; W. D. Euler, North Waterloo; J. E. A. Dubuc, Chicoutimi; and G. A. Vanturel, Prescott. But in the recent contest none of these men definitely allied themselves with Premier King, and in fact on vital issues some of them were definitely opposed to him.

R. W. Jacobs in the last Parliament refused to support Premier King. He is a protectionist, and was opposed in the recent election by an official Liberal candidate.

Henri Bourassa has declared he dislikes Mr. Meighen more than he does Mr. King. But although he was opposed by an official Liberal, Mr. Meighen's firm stand for the maintenance of the British connection will furnish Mr. Bourassa with an excuse to support Mr. King. J. E. Dubuc was originally a Conservative, and defeated the official Liberal candidate in Chicoutimi. W. D. Euler was elected as a protectionist, but he can be relied upon to assist in maintaining an anti-protectionist Government in office. G. A. Vanturel, Prescott, defeated the official Liberal nominee. Then there is a group of Western

French Have Year's Task In Morocco

Can Conquer Riff, Vincent Sheean Believes, But Not Before Another Twelve-month of Hard Fighting

Tribesmen Getting Short of Munitions

Riffians Keep Spirits Up With Belief France Will Be Hampered by Rebellion Elsewhere

By VINCENT SHEEAN
Special Correspondent of The Colonist and North American Newspaper Alliance with the Riff army.

(Copyright, 1925, in Canada, United States, Great Britain, South America and Japan by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Vincent Sheean, the only newspaper correspondent who has visited the Riff since the recent combined offensive by France and Spain, has now returned to the Riff after his two months' survey of Abd-el-Krim's country and army.

This is the first of a series in which he will sum up the conclusions of his observations.

TANGIER, Nov. 9.—With the forces of the three combatants—France, Spain and the Riff—France, on their present basis, Abd-el-Krim can wage war with a reasonable chance of continued success for another year. This is the conclusion of my observations of the military equipment and resources of the Riff on all fronts during the past two months.

It is a conclusion which will please nobody concerned in the struggle, since the French believe that the Riffian power can be crushed during next spring's campaign, and the Riffians themselves are convinced that they can continue the war practically indefinitely. The third party, Spain, has apparently already announced that the war is approaching its conclusion at the present moment.

My estimate of the Riffians' capacity for continued hostilities is based on a detailed study and observation of the military organization and economic system, from the advanced posts near Tangier, along the Tangier-Tetuan road through the interior into the Riff itself, and then, south, along the French border. The factors which will eventually defeat Abd-el-Krim's this winter, are substantially three: first, the continual decrease in his supplies of arms, ammunition and money; second, the treachery, desertion and rebellion on the allied Arab tribes who now form the largest section of Abd-el-Krim's kingdom; third, the reorganization of the French military along the southern front to conform to the conditions of the country and to the tactics of the enemy.

Getting Short of Ammunition
The first of these factors is already in operation. There is no actual shortage of arms and ammunition in the Riff now, but next spring's campaign will find Abd-el-Krim's army so short that raising of ammunition as well as food will be necessary. A second factor—the desertion of the Arab tribesmen—is not yet fully operative, although some of the best reliable Arab allies, for instance, the Branes, have gone over to the French.

The third factor, the radical change of French military tactics, is considered a certainty by Riffians themselves, and I am reliably informed that Tangier that such a change has been practically decided upon by the French. This next year's campaign will see an end of the useless and useless French dependence on heavy artillery, mass infantry action and large-scale aviation operations, all of which have been the basis of their up to fantastic proportions without sensibly affecting the military position on the southern front.

Abd-el-Krim expects next year's French tactics to exhibit a return to colonial warfare proper—that is, flying columns of light artillery, cavalry action and the intensive use of the tribal political weapons of propaganda, bribery and intimidation.

Riff Army Efficient
These three main aspects of the situation in the immediate future are fully realized by both Abd-el-Krim and his brother, Ridj Mahomed, but they believe that certain external factors will help them.

Love War, Don't Want Peace
As individuals, these Riff regulars actually love war and have no desire for peace. This was long difficult for me to believe, but I have experienced with them finally brought conviction. They are natural fighting animals, and their abysmal ignorance, these natural characteristics. In addition to this, they have the medieval attitude toward their great leader, to whom they refer simply as "Our Lord," and for whom they are quite willing to die at any moment.

This nucleus of regulars is the Riff strength, and by these twenty thousand Riffians Abd-el-Krim survives or falls.

But outside of this regular army the story is far different. In the Riff, for two years, Abd-el-Krim's brother, at the head of the Riff army, has conquered a territory roughly four to five times the size of the Riff itself, including the small district called Rhomarra, the large western zone called Djebala, and all the border tribes along the French frontier and beyond to the Wergha River. This territory is populated by semitic Arabs of entirely different race from the Riffians, infinitely less warlike and entirely unreliable.

Arabs Conscripted
Since last November, when the Riff conquest of the western zone was made complete by the withdrawal of the Spanish troops, Abd-el-Krim has enrolled these Arabs by conscription, and has attempted to assimilate them into the Riff nation. The organization of the Arabs is exactly the same as that of the Riffians, but in view of their character they have almost universally been offered by Riffians.

The total strength of the Arab allies, counting all the tribes along the French border except the Branes, I estimate at another 20,000. This brings the total of Abd-el-Krim's fighting strength to about 40,000. My figure is vastly lower than any ever given by the Riff authorities themselves, yet it is the only figure which conforms to the obvious facts as I saw them in all parts of the country.

On the French front last month the total strength of the Riff army varied between 15,000 and 20,000, counting all the Arabs, many of whom changed sides from time to time throughout the campaign.

The Riff army is equipped with rifles and hand grenades, but the supply of grenades is very limited. The supply of rifles is almost unlimited, and includes more than 50,000 Spanish rifles, besides 4,000 to 10,000 French arms, of which 1,200 are modern Lebel, bought last winter in Algeria. Rifles plentiful as Spaniards.

There is no shortage of rifles, and it is unlikely there will ever be any shortage as long as the Spanish have any to lose. But ammunition is already looking low, and I learned that the reserves for the next few months are causing worry already.

The Arab population is held to Abd-el-Krim by two means—first, the appeal of Moslem fanaticism, and second, by intimidation. The first means is generally sufficient, but there is plenty of the second also, as I saw in Rhomarra and among the Beni-Derkhoum tribes, just north of Beni-Zeroual.

Morale is maintained almost unimpaired, except on the French border, thanks to the telephone, which unites all parts of the country and serves as a powerful instrument of propaganda. Their darkest hour, the Riffians, too, manufacture victories, like their European opponents. Thus I learned on the French border the surprising news that the Riff army had captured Tetuan—information similar to that which astonished me on my arrival in Tangier to the effect that the Spanish had captured Ajdir.

Riff Generals
The generals commanding the Riff army are five, counting Abd-el-Krim himself, who seldom takes the field. The only really first-rate commander in the European sense is Sidj Mahomed, the commander-in-chief. Next in rank comes Hamid Boudra, Minister of War, a tribesman of the old school, who now commands the Tetuan front. On the French front the two generals since the beginning of the war have been Shaib Ben Moha, a clever guerrilla fighter, who directs the eastern zone, and Chail Abaleim, Bel Hadj Mohammed, an old-time old soldier and a terrible disciplinarian, who commands the front reaching from Wezzan to Wergha.

This army, they say, may seem, with its inadequate equipment, is strengthened tenfold by the conditions of topography and climate, and by the fact that there is no waste motion nor wasted energy of any sort. There are no supply trains or supply system. The army lives off the country. The standard of living is habitually so low in the interior of Morocco that a soldier is able to fight many weeks on a daily ration consisting solely of two loaves of brown barley bread.

The army's equipment travels on the soldiers' backs, and weather or bad terrain is non-existent to either Riffian or Arab.

These reasons, despite the tremendous disparity of numbers and equipment between the opposing forces have convinced me, during my two months of observation, that Abd-el-Krim can still defy both France and Spain until this time next year. And if external factors intervene, as seems increasingly likely, the Riff chief stands a good chance to achieve his desired victory and independence.

STANDARD OF QUALITY FOR OVER 50 YEARS

MAKE BETTER HOME MADE BREAD

Under their regular army, comprising all the able-bodied males of eight Riffian or Berber tribes, has been trained and organized. This regular army includes the following tribes: Beni-Bokoya, Boufra, Beni-Toussin, Beni-Yetoff, Temsamen, Beni-Ullahik, Beni-Amst, and a part of the Tafersit tribe.

Crack Shots and Fearless
Their total strength I estimate at a maximum of 25,000 men, or a minimum of 10,000. They have all seen service for between three and five years. They are all crack shots, fearless, reliable and fanatically devoted to Abd-el-Krim and Sidj Mahomed.

In guerrilla they are probably the best troops in the world today, and in hand-to-hand fighting, such as their recent battles against the Spanish at Ajdir, and the French in Beni-Zeroual, they are invincible.

They are organized in units as follows: three or four hundred, for which the official name is merely the Arabic numeral corresponding to those English numerals. The smallest unit in the Riff regular army is the mia, or hundred. An army of five mia, or five divisions of one hundred each, is considered a large force, and when the Spanish landed at Cape Moro Nueve on September 3, the total strength of the defenders was five such divisions.

There is no tribal division maintained in the Riff regular army, and no division into infantry, cavalry and artillery. The best gunners are distinct from the army entirely. The "Prestige" of the Riff regular army is generally they do not even salute, while the crack Riff troops are very proud of their discipline, and can like the Prussian Guards on parade.

Love War, Don't Want Peace
As individuals, these Riff regulars actually love war and have no desire for peace. This was long difficult for me to believe, but I have experienced with them finally brought conviction. Poppy Day Results Highly Gratifying
Collection of $1,077 Taken Saturday—Tag Was Organized for Relief

Poppy Day resulted Saturday in a collection of $1,077.

The Armistice Period Committee, which organized the tag, is very gratified with the results. Taggers were on the streets as early as 7 a.m. and worked until late in the afternoon, so that the majority of shoppers and business people were given an opportunity to express their contribution. There were twelve corners convened, and between fifty and sixty taggers operated at these stations during the day. At headquarters, 1221 Government Street, they were provided by the Women's Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion with refreshments.

The tag was convened by Mrs. H. P. Thorpe and Mrs. Crocker, and among the others who were active at headquarters were Mr. H. Macnool, secretary of the Armistice Period Committee; Mr. D. Cameron, and several others.

The collection is to be used for relief of necessitous cases among ex-service men and their dependents, and to provide smokes and comforts for ex-service men who are patients at the various hospitals.

Poppies were distributed during the week to the schools. A great number of the merchants of the city purchased the Armistice Day emblem for window decoration. The result being that the crimson flower was to be seen everywhere, worn as buttonholes by people in the streets, decorating motors, and flaming from the shop windows.

Long Life in Bulgaria
Credited to Buttermilk
Drinking

New York consumes large quantities of buttermilk every day in the quick-lunch places, in the hotels and at soda fountains, says The New York Times. Ninety per cent of this buttermilk is of the so-called synthetic variety; that is, it is made from sweet milk by the addition of cultures. Old-timers say that it is superior to the buttermilk out of the churn. The increase in the consumption of buttermilk in New York has been gradual over a period of years. Metchnikoff's statement years ago that the drinking of buttermilk in Bulgaria explained the prevalence of so many octogenarians in that land is said to have given the original impetus. Doctors often recommend buttermilk to their patients, and it is apparent that the consumption is now increasing rapidly. In fact, one chain of restaurants reports that its sale of buttermilk has tripled in the last eight months. There are already half a dozen stands in New York where little else than buttermilk is sold. One of them dispenses buttermilk directly out of the churn.

The young Territorial subaltern was attending his first camp. "Well, old chap," said a chummy brother officer as they crawled into their sleeping-bags, "in this the first time you have ever slept in a tent?" "I don't know—yet," replied the youngster gloomily.

"Wired Wireless" Is Property of Public

U.S. Supreme Court Rules General Squier's Invention Open to All

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 7.—The supreme court of the United States has refused to review the decision of a lower court in which it held that the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has the right to use "wired wireless" through the patent of General George D. Squier, who at the time of his invention was chief of the signal corps of the United States Army.

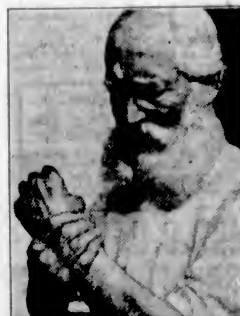

The lower court contended that a patent taken out by an official of the Government can be used by the public as public property, and not only by the Government itself. In refusing to review this case, the United States supreme court has upheld this opinion.

Steamers of Another Day

Most boys have been on board one of the great Empresses or other liners of the Pacific. When we see the comfort and luxury in which people travel nowadays we forget that our grandfathers had a very different opinion of steamers. Read what the great novelist, Charles Dickens said about them:

"I never will trust myself upon the wide ocean, if it please Heaven, in a steamer again. Consider two of their dangers. "First, that if the funnel were blow over-board the vessel must instantly be on fire from stem to stern; to comprehend which circumstance you have only to understand that the funnel is more than forty feet high, and that at night you see the solid fire two or three feet above its top. "Secondly, each of these boats consumes between London and Halifax 700 tons of coal, and it is pretty clear that she must either be too heavy when she comes out of port, or too light when she goes in. The daily difference in her rolling, as she burns the coals out, is something absolutely fearful. Add to all this that by day and night she is full of fire and people, that she has no boats, and that the struggling of that enormous machinery in a heavy sea seems as though it would rend her into fragments."

No wonder he came back in a sailing ship from his visit to America. "You call this a summer resort, I believe," said the sarcastic visitor. "I am unaware of any place to which summer resorts more regularly returned the native stiffy. "Magistrate—"Are you sure he was intoxicated?" "No, sir, not positive; but his wife says he brought home a manhole cover and tried to play it on the gramophone."

Indians Follow Sports Through Microphones

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 7.—Poor Lo has succumbed once more to the white man's inventions—this time the radio.

During the recent World's Series, a group of members of the Yakima tribe on the reservation across the Columbia River in Central Washington listened in to broadcast returns of the game. As Pittsburgh or Washington diamond gladiators played to their satisfaction grunts of approval rose from their backers among the crowd.

Some of the members are not versed in the language of the white man so one, better trained than his fellow tribesmen, took down the play-by-play description in shorthand and then translated it in intervals of silence to those who could understand only the Yakima jargon. Several of the Indians, well versed in America's national game, kept intelligent box scores of each game, changing the figures accurately with each play.

Brilliant Chapter in History Written by Jugo Statesman

Stephen Radich, Merry Little Bookseller, of Croatia's Capital, Once Derided and Imprisoned, Welds Serb-Croat Ties—Alliance Made by His Influence

By HENRY BAKERLEIN

In the ordinary course of things a Jugo-Slav statesman would not be an object of great interest to the American reader who has, as a rule, a rather vague idea as to the whereabouts of Jugo-Slavs. Nor is he alone in this respect. The queen of that country laughingly told an English lady some little time ago that her mother, the Queen of Rumania, sometimes addresses her envelopes by mistake to the Queen of Czechoslovakia (which is a Republic). But if Jugo-Slavs, the country of 14,000,000 energetic people which has grown out of the pre-war Serbia, is a little vague and misty to people who live far away from it, there is a Jugo-Slav statesman, a little, pear-shaped, bearded man with benevolent, very short-sighted eyes, whose career has been so dramatic that it cannot leave us cold. For many years he has championed the Croat peasants (Croatia is a prosperous part of Jugo-Slavia, and until this war it was under the alien domination of the Hungarians).

Radich Excommunicated

Stephen Radich, the little bookseller of Zagreb, Croatia's capital, stood up for the peasants against the encroachments of their masters and of the church. He was excommunicated by the archbishop, persons were prohibited from attending the meetings of this man whom the archbishop called anti-Christ. But the Croats, who did not know him, were curious as to the person who experienced anti-Christ, and his meetings became more and more crowded. In the end he was excommunicated. In the end he was excommunicated. In the end he was excommunicated.

Wins Love of People

In several Croat constituencies Radich has received 100 per cent of the vote; he is adored by the peasants, but until a short time ago he was regarded with grave suspicion by most of the Serbs. And it seemed as if the domestic affairs of Jugo-Slavia would never become reconciled with the Serbs ranged behind their aged premier, Pashitch, and the Croats behind Radich. Now and then the dominant Serbs from Radich's prison, but this only made his own people love him the more. Because he held out for a certain amount of Croat government in Croatia, he has become him of high treason. He went to Moscow, to study the conditions in Russia; the Serbs accused him of high treason. He went to Moscow, to study the conditions in Russia; the Serbs accused him of high treason.

But this time, while he was incarcerated, his nephew, Paul Radich, a clever person, negotiated with the Serbs, both sides avoiding recriminations, and the happy result has been that at least an alliance has been brought about between Serb and Croat; the Cabinet now consists of members of both parties, with Paul Radich filling the important post of Agrarian reform minister. He was, of course, liberated, was invited to the King's beautiful castle on the Lake of Bled in Slovenia, and in a short time will proceed as the chief delegate of his country.

It was fortunate the other day in finding Stephen Radich in his flat at Zagreb, shortly before he left to attend the League of Nations at Geneva. He was then about to start for Belgrade, the capital, where he and his eighty deputies have for an long been absentees from the Parliament. It was touching to see the affection with which they regard him, and when, in his country's fashion, he kisses them farewell, they have between delight and tears. Most of his deputies are true representatives of their class, and not mere lawyers, as in too many legislatures in this world. A few belong to a more cultured class, judging from their speech and clothes—for example, the youngest of them, who is the only Mahometan, hailing from Herzegovina. Radich is a little man, bubbling over with vivacity. We had not met for a couple of years. He threw his arms round me, took me away to another room where everything was as in Shelley's handwriting, "a most admired disorder"—a great deal of furniture, ancient pictures, modern pictures of my host and his wife, a box-relief of my host, a sketch of him, fruit lying about, various instruments of music decorated with Croat ribbons, then piles of books in several languages and many pamphlets.

Made Up With Serbs

"You see," he smiled, "we have made it up with the Serbs." Mr. Pashitch was advised by some of his friends that it would be a good thing to have another general election, which violence could be brought to bear, but Pashitch said that this system had been used at the previous election and that it would not do to repeat it. Even in case of success, he declared, the price would be too high. He is a cautious old gentleman. It is much easier, said Radich, to come to an understanding with intelligent people than with stupid ones. The most exasperating thing in political life is to have to do with stupid people. Mahometan ones will occasionally conduct themselves well, but stupid fellows are hopeless.

Causes of Delay

"How is it," I asked, "that this alliance between the Serbs has been so long delayed? Your state has suffered under it?"

"You will have heard," said he, "of one of our statesmen, Svetozar Pribitchewitch. Well, this man is one of the most industrious and patriotic and straightforward of all the Southern Slavs, but his methods are utterly wrong. He would set about in a brutal fashion to compel the Serbs and Croats to fall into each other's arms and embrace each other, which is a very senseless way of reconciling them. One must always remember that their history has been quite different and that they have enjoyed totally different cultures. It is true that their spoken language is identical, but one uses the Latin, the other the Cyrillic, alphabet; one is a Roman Catholic, the other is Greek Orthodox, and among the slightly less educated classes religion plays a prominent part."

Impatient Statesmen

"Toughly and impatiently Pribitchewitch wanted to weld together our state. On and off, after the war, he occupied posts of Minister of the Interior and of Education. He told the Serbs that he alone understood the Croats, because he had lived so long in Croatia. He is, indeed, one of the Serb minority in that province, for he springs from the mountainous Lika district, where they produce a very sturdy race of men. He repeatedly told the Serbians authorities in Belgrade that the Croats hated them. How far this was from the truth could be seen the other day, when the King and Queen came to Zagreb and were accorded the most enthusiastic reception which they have ever had. Much of this enthusiasm was due to the fact that this political arrangement between Croats and Serbs had at last been made."

"Pribitchewitch had a sort of idea that the Croats were not a nation, but that they had been invented by Austria in order to put them up against the Serbs, and that all the historical who dealt with the Croats as a separate entity had been bought by Austria. He therefore imagined that one had no need to consider the Croats' susceptibilities. But now I think I can say, his pernicious influence has been destroyed. His Deputies have become so small a band of men as to lose all importance, and I have heard that he himself, a deeply disappointed man, is nursing his grief in Dalmatia, by the Adriatic."

Not Taken Seriously

I remember that I had seen somewhere that Pribitchewitch was fond of saying that Radich might not be taken seriously. But the ideas which he put forward in his plan of action do not seem to err on the side of frivolity.

"We shall save Parliamentarianism," he said, "for up to now none of our Governments has had a real majority. We shall have a strong Government in the good sense of that word, so that we shall reform our administration and fix our offices, and we shall be in a position to take the long view of things."

"May I for a moment ask you about Russia, since all the world is interested in what is going on there?" "If Lenin had lived," said Radich, "that country would by this time have become a peasant democracy. It is my absolute conviction that in the end this will happen. The people are not actively but passively against the men in power. Of Marxism in the villages nothing remains, two-thirds of the army is not Communist, and nine-tenths of the Jugoslavians are against it. Talking of peasant democracy, is it not the destiny of the smaller people to act as laboratories for the larger ones, and shall we not in Jugo-Slavia show Russia the way?"

"You have spoken," I said, "of the Russian army. Now people say that you are a pacifist, that your great aim is to diminish the Jugoslav army and that on this point you and the predominant people in Serbia are at opposite poles."

Croats Do Military Service

"All I can tell you about our army," remarked Radich, "is that no one is more delighted at the present moment than the Serbians, because now for the first time the Croat peasants will do their military service with enthusiasm. We shall see, later, whether it is possible to reduce the period of service. We are now so powerful internally that we can afford to be pacifists. The bellicose attitude springs from fear. Would France be bellicose if she had no dread of Germany?"

I alluded to the fact that Radich has been charged by his opponents with being an irresponsible demagogue.

"They say I am evading my responsibility," he answered, "because I have not entered the cabinet, leaving that task to my nephew and three other Deputies of my party. But, first of all, I am not for the moment in the National Assembly. When I was lately put into prison by my present colleagues, I was deprived of my seat, and with us it is a rather complicated matter to be re-elected, as the election has to be held for the whole department, which in Croatia means eight constituencies. No doubt I shall presently be able to enter Parliament, but my approaching task is to go to Geneva as delegate of my country to the League of Nations. The atmosphere of Geneva is fifty years in advance of our ordinary life, so that I shall feel very much at home there."

"And those people," he laughed, "who think I shall be reckless, and so forth, because I happen to be a person to whom new ideas come rather abundantly, will find that, with a due sense of my responsibilities, I shall make every effort to show those at Geneva that I am a reasonable man. Neither need they be afraid that I shall weary that august assembly by speeches of the length of some of those I have delivered in my own country. In fact, I am now training myself to speak more and more briefly. Shall we conclude this interview?"

Are quickly, pleasantly relieved by Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine

If children's colds are got rid of promptly there will be less tendency to pneumonia and consumption in later life. It is the neglected, hanging-on cold that weakens the lungs and develops into serious trouble.
No treatment for coughs and colds was ever so popular with the children as Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It is so pleasant to the taste, so delightfully soothing and healing and affords relief so quickly that children soon turn to it instinctively when choked up with a cold or annoyed by coughing.
It is a mother's favorite treatment for croup and bronchitis, for she knows it will bring relief when the midnight coughing keeps her up. It is wise to always have a bottle at hand for prompt use in emergency.

She Often Laid But Now Here She Lies; Farewell, Dolly Gray

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 9.—California's first obituary of a hen was issued today by Miss Rita M. Wilkerson, of Auburn, in explanation of the elaborate funeral services with which she recently laid her prize chicken, Dolly Gray, to rest in an expensive and specially manufactured casket.

Declaring that the hen was a friend of humans, rather than a companion of fowls, the obituary set forth the high lights of Dolly Gray's life as follows:

Janeville, Lassen County, June 1, 1916; died at Auburn, Placer County, October 29, 1925.

Began laying eggs on Thanksgiving Day, 1916, producing one a day until the morning of death, and two a day twice during 1917. Total output, 3,359 eggs, or one short of 280 dozen. Decedent was born in incubator, raised a pet, loved humans and feared the first full grown chicken she saw. She was trained by a public school teacher, could recognize the voice of her owner over the telephone and answered "yes" or "no" by nods of the head.

Billy and I are engaged. You don't mean it! No, but he thinks I do.

The enemy of teeth and gums
Film is the great enemy of teeth and gums, a chief cause, according to world's dental authorities, of pyorrhea and most tooth and gum troubles. It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. Germs by the millions breed in it. It holds food in contact with teeth, inviting the acid that causes decay.

You can't have prettier, whiter teeth; you can't have healthier teeth unless you combat that film.

Varied New Necklines in Vogue This Season With Scarf Predominating

Pauline Stark, in Centre Photograph, Showing One of the Smartest Modes of Wearing the New Scarf Neckline.

NECKLINES this season are as varied as the feminine taste. While not so long ago the bateau neck reigned supreme in fashionable circles and everything from sport sweaters to formal evening gowns boasted the boat like Jenny neck, today there are numerous necklines, collars and scarf effects gracing both daytime and evening frocks, so that one can choose the neckline which is most becoming and yet be distinctively chic.

Scarf necklines, introduced with the vogue of the separate colorful scarf several seasons ago, remain an important feature in this season's fashions. The attached scarf on the smart new two-piece frock which Pauline Stark wears in "Paris," her newest film, shown in the centre photograph, is one of the most fashionable necklines today. Most of the smart new two-piece frocks so popular this season, have this smart scarf neckline, permitting its wearer to fashion the scarf in any number of interesting ways suitable to her fancy or mood, thereby adding a fresh charm to the frock with each new way the scarf is worn.

From Paris comes word that the new separate scarf for next Spring has a colorful hand-painted motif on a solid background. The bizarre note rather than the conservative will be emphasized in these motifs, as the above sketches show.

Most prominent in this season's many types of varied necklines is the deep V back decollete in formal evening gowns, the smart sport turtle neck which came on Summer sweaters and remained to grace smart jersey sport frocks for Winter wear, and, of course, the popular scarf effect. Another interesting new neckline is the detachable stock collar, which is seen on new slip-on over-blouses. Many of the new evening frocks this Winter will be fashioned with the uneven neckline as well as the fashionable un-derneath stock collar, which is seen on new slip-on over-blouses. Many of the new evening frocks this Winter will be fashioned with the uneven neckline as well as the fashionable underneath stock collar, which is seen on new slip-on over-blouses.

The Lonely House

By MRS. BELLOC LOWDNE

THE STORY SO FAR
LILY FAIRFIELD, a young English girl, on her way to visit her mother's step-sister, the Countess Poldi, at Monaco, HERCULES POPEAU, a Frenchman, a pleasant travelling companion, ANGUS STUART, captain in the London Scotland Yard.

When they reach Monte Carlo nobody is there to meet Lily.

CHAPTER II
Aunt Cony

M. Popeau saw the growing look of discomfort on his pretty companion's face. He turned to Captain Stuart: "Mademoiselle must have lunch with us at the Hotel de Paris, eh?" But Lily shook her head decidedly and said, "Very well. Then I will look after our young lady," he exclaimed. "I will accompany her to her destination."

"I thought of doing that," said Captain Stuart a little awkwardly.

M. Popeau shook his head. "No, no! It is more right, more convenient, that I should go. Am I not your friend's temporary guardian?"

She held out her hand to Captain Stuart. He held it perhaps a moment longer than she expected, but at last: "Good-bye," he said abruptly.

"Good-bye, Miss Fairfield. Let me see—Sunday is Saturday. I wonder if I might call on you tomorrow, Sunday?"

"Yes, do," she said a little shyly. "You've got the address?"

It was nice to know that they would meet again tomorrow.

As for M. Popeau, he was telling himself for perhaps the thousandth time in his life what very queer, odd people the British were. How queer to think that a stranger as was this Captain Stuart to call on her—without any kind of proper introduction.

A taxicab named slowly by M. Popeau hailed it. The taxi driver had not the slightest wish to take on a new fare. He had brought a party out to Monte Carlo from Mentone, and was going back there.

"You should be glad, very glad indeed, my good boy," exclaimed M. Popeau, "to have the chance of earning twenty-five francs by a few moments' drive. You know perfectly well that you are bound to take me by the law."

"No, in Monaco," said the man sullenly. "The law is not the same in France as in Monaco."

"If you are a Monégasque," exclaimed M. Popeau, "then you must be well acquainted with my friend, M. Bouton."

The man's manner changed, and became cringing.

"I thought so," M. Popeau turned to Lily. "My friend Bouton is Police Commissary here," he observed significantly.

Without any more ado the taxicab turned round and started at a speed which seemed to Lily very dangerous. Up and up they went, along winding ways out in the mountain side. All at once the taxi took a sudden turn to the left and drew up on a rough clearing surrounded by old, grey olive trees. The atmosphere was strangely still, and though it was a hot day, Lily suddenly felt chilly—a touch, no doubt, of the mountain air. There crept over her, too, a queer, eerie feeling of utter loneliness.

"This is the most convenient point by which a carriage can approach the villa," said the driver turning round. "The house is not far—just a few yards up through the trees."

At the top of a row of steps cut in the rocky bank was a wicket gate, on which were painted in faint-fading Roman letters the words "La Solitude."

The cabman opened the gate, and the three passed through into a grove of orange trees. Round the steep path broadened into a way leading straight on to a lawn which fell sharply away from the stone terrace side. All at once the taxi took a peculiar angle, to the left of the villa was a windowless square building which looked like a studio.

As they all three stood there, the first sign of life at La Solitude suddenly appeared in the person of a huge black and white cat. It crept slowly, stealthily round the house and rubbed itself along the warm wall. Lily felt a little tremor of surprise and discomfort. It was an odd coincidence that she should have seen in her dream-nightmare just such a cat as was this cat.

The entrance to La Solitude was just a plain, green-painted door set into the bare house wall. At last it opened slowly, and an old woman, dressed very neatly in a faded blue print dress, with a yellow silk bandana handkerchief tightly wound round her head, stood, unsmiling, before them.

"We did not expect the lady till the day after tomorrow. Please come this way."

He and Lily followed the old woman down the corridor. She opened a door to the left, and stood aside for the strangers to pass through into what seemed at first a completely darkened room. But with the words, "I will go and tell Madame la Comtesse you are here," she went and drew up one of the opaque yellow blinds.

There came the sound of quick steps in the corridor. The door opened, and Lily Fairfield beheld, for the first time for over ten years, the woman who had produced such a brilliant, lasting impression on the quiet Bpau household.

"My dear child! What a surprise! We were not expecting you till—" and then Countess Poldi stopped short, for she had suddenly realized that there was someone else in the room besides her young kinswoman.

M. Popeau advanced and bowed. "Forgive my intrusion, Madame," he said civilly. "I have been Mademoiselle's travelling companion from Paris, and as I am very well acquainted with Monte Carlo I thought it best to escort her to your hospitable house."

While this colloquy was going on Lily was feeling more and more surprised, for somehow Aunt Cony looked utterly different from what she remembered her as having looked twelve years ago. She had then appeared to Lily, a child of nine years of age, a very smart, fashionable-looking lady, wearing beautiful clothes. She now looked slightly absurd.

Still, it was evident to M. Popeau that the person now standing before him was what he called, in common parlance, a woman of the world.

They were all three still standing, and Mr. Popeau told himself that it was time he said his own good-luncheon—and time for his young travelling companion to have hers.

"I must be going," he began. "We have had no food, any of us. Mademoiselle, also, will be glad of her dinner. I hope that you will allow me to come and pay my respects to you and to Mademoiselle? I will do myself that honor tomorrow, Sunday."

"We shall always be delighted to see you," replied the Countess heartily.

A few moments later there came the sound of the taxi turning round on the clearing below—and an acute feeling of loneliness and of depression stole over Lily Fairfield. She realized, suddenly, that she was tired out.

Tomorrow—Old Cristina

The Oxford Voice
Worse Than Oxford
Trousers, Says Critic

LONDON, Nov. 9.—The Oxford voice, "that lamentable thing that is worse than Oxford trousers," is the worst vice on the English stage today, in the opinion of St. John Ervine, dramatic critic and playwright. This voice, he said, was more revolting than the Cockney accent.

Swinging to comment on the United States stage, Mr. Ervine declared Boston was a town where the poorest plays got the largest audiences and the best plays the least, while he described Chicago as one of the worst places in the United States for theatre production.

He has just returned from extensive travel.

Seven Teams Will Constitute National Hockey Loop

Pittsburgh Will Be at Home to Boston in Opening Game, Nov. 26

Eastern Pond League Adopts Anti-Defence Rule—Hamilton's Effort to Regain Franchise Abortive—No Club Payroll to Exceed $35,000

MONTREAL, Nov. 9.—Seven teams will compete in the National Hockey League this season. Pittsburgh was admitted to the professional hockey circuit at the annual meeting of the league held here over the week-end. Hamilton's last attempt to regain the franchise they operated last season was abortive.

Two applications were received from different sources in Chicago, the object being to start a club in the "Windy City" next season. Both applications were tabled for further information. The former Hamilton players, it was stated, were still under suspension, though it is estimated that some action may be expected in their case within the next two weeks.

Adopt Anti-Defence Rule
The anti-defence rule which has been in vogue in professional hockey in the West recently was adopted by the league at its session. This will allow only two men of a team exclusive of the goalkeeper, from standing behind their own blue line to await the advance of the puck.

The league also ruled that the teams should be penalized and the puck faced off again when the player carrying the puck stopped with it. It was felt by the representatives of the league that the side with the odd man should make it a point to go after the puck and that it was kept moving there could be no satisfactory rule made to halt the defensive measures of a handicapped team.

Paid Limited to Twelve Inches
The goalkeeper's pads in future will be limited to twelve inches of exposed surface. Another rule embodied in the code was that practised last season regarding automatic suspension after three major penalties received by any one player in a season. In the event of suspension and later reinstatement three more major penalties will be necessary before the next suspension.

Several amendments were made to the constitution. Mr. Patrick brought forward the question of a salary limit for teams. No club may have a payroll exceeding $35,000 for the season. No team shall be allowed to carry more than twelve players in uniform after December 31. No club may have more than fourteen players on their reserve list.

Schedule Yet Unsettled
The question of a schedule is as yet unsettled.

Title of Mickey Walker Will Be At Stake Shortly

NEWARK, N.J., Nov. 9.—Under a new ruling by the New Jersey State Boxing Commission, compelling all champions as well as their challengers in bouts here, to enter the ring within their class weight limit, Mickey Walker's welterweight title will be at stake in his bout with Salvo Freeman, of Chicago, at the Newark Armory, November 25. Walker and Freeman must scale at or under 147, the welterweight limit, on the afternoon of the fight.

The players were kept going at top speed for the full period by Manager Eddie Cleghorn, who served as referee. The club, in the opinion of many experts who witnessed the practice, will start the season with a much brighter outlook this winter than last.

Basketball Games Played at Sooke
Sooke, Nov. 8.—The first basketball game of the season, held in Charter's Hall on Saturday last, was a thriller from start to finish. The first game was between England vs. Sooke. With both teams playing a good game. The score at half-time was 18-10 in favor of the Sooke, while the final gave 22-14 still in favor of the visitors.

The second game was a triumph for Sooke A. over James Bay Methodist. At half-time the close score of 15-17 in favor of Sooke held the capacity audience in suspense until the second half closed with 29-19, being the largest score yet attained by the home team. The visitors had hard luck in shooting throughout the latter half. A lively dance to music supplied by the Sooke three-piece orchestra, and the serving of refreshments concluded the evening.

Sunday School Hoop Division Opens League Matches Tonight

Memorial Hall Will Be Scene of Initial Tilt—First Presbyterian Senior Men to Try Conclusions With Onwegos—Fast Games Expected—Interest Keen

The first basketball league games of the 1925-26 season will be played tonight at the Memorial Hall, when the Sunday School League opens its schedule with three fast games.

The Sunday School Basketball League was first formed in 1913, and has been growing ever since until now it is hard to accommodate all the teams that wish to compete in the various divisions. This will be the fourteenth season for S.S. basketball in the city, and the prospects are good for another successful year.

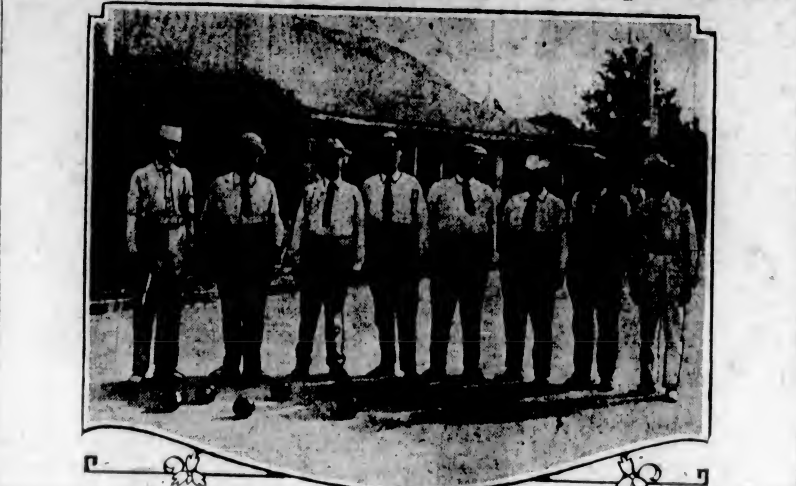

The opening game tonight will be between the Congos Intermediate Girls and the Christ Church Intermediate. The Congregationals are now amalgamated with the Metropolitan, but will keep their last season's team intact. They had a fast team last season and should be considerably stronger this season.

Intermediate Boys will provide the excitement in the second game of the evening, when the R. Andrew's Presbyterian lads meet the Hustlers of City Temple. They can always be depended upon to put a strong team on the floor, and should give the Onwegos all they can handle.

Tonight's games are as follows:

7:45 p.m.—Intermediate Girls—Congos vs. Christ Church.
8:25 p.m.—Intermediate Boys—"A"—St. Andrew's vs. Hustlers (City Temple).
9:00 p.m.—Senior Men—First Presbyterian vs. Onwegos.

More Than Six Centuries of Sportsmen

Not less a periodical than The Saturday Evening Post, recently discussing the sport of bowling as an exhilarating exercise, offered this photograph as evidence of the popularity of the game among older men. The octette shown above is labeled "Eight Members of the St. Petersburg, Florida, Bowling Club." Careful investigation reveals the fact that six of the eight men are visiting Canadians, snapped while on a short holiday in the South.

The third and fifth in the row are American, and the others, from left to right, are R. P. Brown, of Toronto; E. P. Pearson, Toronto; H. Williams, Toronto, skip; E. H. Osier, Cobourg; W. G. Boak, an Ontario, and John Crowe, of Glueph.

The most juvenile of the Canadian athletes is in his eightieth year, and the oldest, Mr. Williams, is eighty-four. The total age of the eight is 644, so that the little group can be referred to as nearly six and a half centuries of sportsmen.

All-Stars Hold Veterans To Draw in Holiday Soccer

Three-All Is Final Score of Match Played at Royal Athletic—Biggest Crowd of Season Present—Junior Team Wins From Wednesday Leaguers

The Victoria rep soccer team and Veterans fought to a three-all draw in the holiday soccer exhibition played yesterday afternoon at the Royal Athletic Park. Despite the chilly north wind which prevailed throughout the afternoon, one of the largest crowds that has watched a football game this year was present.

The goals scored in yesterday's game came in bunches like bananas. In the first period both teams scored two goals each, which were netted inside of eight minutes. The two goals in the second period had an intermission of about two minutes between them.

Rep Squad Handicapped
The rep squad was handicapped at the start of the season by the absence of two of their players. For a period of ten minutes they played with only nine men, and then for fifteen with ten. On the other hand the Vets were greatly handicapped, not through injuries sustained in last Saturday's game on the Mainland with St. Salvours. Three of their players, McCormick, "Noble" Clarke and Edwards were on the injured list, but substitutes were provided for the exhibition.

Jack Clarke, their flashy center-forward in yesterday's game, played with his shoulder strapped, while Smith was in distress through injuries to his knee.

Cameron Opens Score
Cameron opened the scoring for the Vets following an attack on the part of the Pacific Coasters. His shot, a fast daisy-cutter, swept across the goal area and found the corner of the net.

Immediately after the face-off Coaster took the ball down the left wing, centred perfectly to Hay, who headed to Tom Watt. Watt took the ball perfectly and headed it past Bridges for the tying goal.

Coaster put the rep squad into the lead for a couple of minutes after the kick-off when he booted the plunk into the net during a scramble in the goal-mouth.

Jack Clarke evened the count about two minutes later when he headed Thorne's perfect pass into the corner of the net. Shortly after this goal Spleers made his appearance on the field and evened up the teams.

Miss Penalty Shot
A penalty was awarded the all-stars when Clancy blocked a drive with his hands in the forbidden area. Cummins tried to find the corner of the net but drove the ball a couple of feet wide.

John Watt put the all-stars into a temporary lead following a splendid solo rush by brother Tom, when he found the corner of the net with a fast cross drive.

Second Flight—Third Round
H. Lineham won from E. L. Pocock, 4-3.
E. M. Brown won from J. R. Kingham, 2-1.

C. R. Whiting won from W. Rasmussen, 2-4.

Fourth Round—Semi-Finals
H. Lineham won from E. W. Ismay, 6-2.
C. R. Whiting won from E. M. Brown, 3-2.

Second Flight—Finals
H. Lineham won from George Straith, 3-1.

Third Flight—Finals
M. R. Jamieson won from H. A. Stuart, 6-4.

Third Flight—Semi-Finals
B. R. Cleer won from E. N. Horsey, 7-2.
A. W. Sherat won from H. T. Matson, 3-5.

B. R. Cleer won from A. W. Sherat, 3-6.

Well, Shanks, Hawkes, Hay, Cummins, John Watt, Tom Watt, Spleers and Coaster.

Victoria Juniors Win

The Victoria Junior soccer eleven disposed of the Wednesday League representatives at Beacon Hill yesterday in an exhibition game by a score of three to one. The youngsters won a clear cut victory and gave their more experienced opponents plenty to think about. The aggressiveness of the younger opponents of the plunkin game was remarkable, and not for one minute during the whole of the game did they show any signs of weakness.

At the conclusion of the first half the score read 1-0 in favor of the eventual winners, but in the second period the Juniors added a pair while the midweek reps registered a lone tally by the aid of a penalty kick.

Kicking down the slope in the first half, the Juniors were on the offensive from the start and the opposing defence was kept busy staying off their early attempts to score. However, this attack soon blew over, and end to end play was the feature for the next twenty minutes. During one of their attacks on the Wednesday Citadel Minnie scored when he beat Shrimpton with a perfect shot at fairly close range.

Made the Score Two to Nil

Fifteen minutes of play had passed when Minnie made it 2-0 for the youngsters by sending in a grounder which Shrimpton failed to handle. Still on the attack, the Juniors gave Shrimpton some warm starts to save which he handled quite safely.

With the turn of the play the Juniors' citadel was in danger, and during an attack on the part of the Wednesday representatives one of the opposing eleven accidentally handled the ball in the forbidden area. Hay scored on the penalty kick.

Shrimpton Injured

Just a few minutes after this tally Shrimpton met with the misfortune that caused his temporary retirement. During the skipper's absence the Juniors scored their third goal when they were awarded a free kick just outside the penalty area.

With a 3-1 score staring them in the face the midweek representatives tried hard to make things a little more even, but time would not permit and when the final whistle sounded the score read 3-1 in favor of the youngsters. Hawkeson refereed and the teams were:

Juniors—Harper; Sweeney and Price; Preston, Crowe and Davis; Keimann, Minnie, Burns, Wagland and Bellies.

Wednesday League—Shrimpton (capt.); Gibson and Hay; Webber, Tipman and McKinnon; Patterson, McKinnon, Speak, Hawkes and Ditchard.

Aim of Church Union

By REV. JOHN CAMPBELL, D.D.

As the British empire is composed of the union of three or four parts, so the church of God should be the union of all branches of the church of God. It is the aim of the church of God to be a united church, and to be a church of the cross to evangelize and Christianize, until the kingdoms of the world shall become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ.

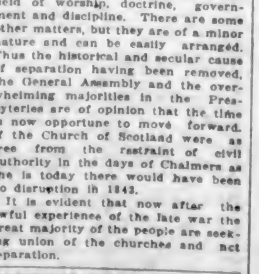

Had I not been convinced that the ultimate aim and objective of the union consummated last June was only an important forward step towards the union of all evangelical churches I certainly would not have been so desirous for that union. That union has been an object lesson to churches in other countries which had been calmly watching and waiting for the result of our deliberations. They are now beginning to agitate union among themselves, being convinced, as we are, that denominational co-operation is at least a makeshift, sacrificing a greater good for a less.

Effect Elsewhere

In the great Republic across the line Church Union is becoming a live question both in the North and South. In the land of Knox, where the natural temperament of the people is unfavorable to ecclesiastical change, there is, as Ezekiel said of a certain valley, "a noise and a shaking, bones coming together, bone to its bone." Recently the fourteen Presbyteries of the United Free Church approved the decision of their own General Assembly sent down to them, which reads as follows: "With the passing of the Church Act, 1921, and the Church of Scotland Property and Endowment Act, 1921, the main causes of separation between the churches have been removed, and the time has now come for entering negotiations with the Church of Scotland with the view of framing a basis of Union."

The main causes of separation to which the remit refers were the restraint laid upon the Church of Scotland through its connection with the state in respect to spiritual freedom and its freedom over the whole field of worship, doctrine, government and discipline. There are some other matters, but they are of a minor nature and can be easily arranged. Thus the historical and secular cause of separation having been removed, the General Assembly and the overwhelming majorities in the Presbyteries are of opinion that the time is now opportune to move forward. If the Church of Scotland were as free from the restraint of civil authority in the days of Chalmers as she is today there would have been no disruption in 1843.

It is evident that now after the awful experience of the late war the great majority of the people are seeking union of the churches and not separation.

Blind Organist Charms Audience By His Music and Personality

Dr. Alfred Hollins Plays to 1,200 People at Metropolitan Church, Showing Not Only Fine Musicianship But Radiant Spirit Which Captivates Listener

If there is anything in the world that has the slightest chance of eclipsing Dr. Alfred Hollins, the musician, it is Dr. Hollins himself. This is a paradoxical way of saying that his personality is so apparent in his playing and in at the same time so engagingly ingenious, that one finds oneself, like an eavesdropper, listening to the music for what it may reveal of the organist himself.

Twelve hundred people spent nearly three hours in this delightful way at the Metropolitan Church last night, pursuing through a dozen or more compositions, the musician cheerful and gayety with which this happy of musicians seems to color faintly even the most sombre of things.

In all that pertains to the technique of music Dr. Hollins is a great artist. He has a fine command of the organ, a clean, sensitive touch, beautiful phrasing and registration, and a very finished style. He is also a delightful composer, one of those whose music is known to every layman, even, who has the slightest interest in organ composition. His reputation in these matters alone attracted ninety-five per cent of his audience. Only a few who had actually heard him before knew how engaging his personality is. In five minutes after reaching the platform he was on the most friendly terms with everyone in the audience through the highly fortunate misfortune of the absence of annotated programmes, and the moment he began to play, after his little description of the work, one continued to enjoy the revelation of the perfectly delightful buoyant spirit of the artist.

Spontaneous Applause

The applause after each number was as spontaneous as the smiling pleasure which the organist displayed in acknowledging it, and the intimacy between the player and his audience developed still more as the evening wore on and he found occasion to offer further little explanations and descriptions of the various works.

It was a delightful programme both in content and interpretation. Being Armistice Day, Dr. Hollins had asked permission to preface his recital with the Chopin Funeral March. Even in this there was a quality of beautiful serenity and triumph rather than of pompous mourning. The succeeding numbers showed the fine distinction of the organist's work in other themes.

Among the most beautiful numbers were his own Concert Overture in C, distinguished by fine execution and a wholesome joyousness, grace and spirit; his own "Intermezzo" and "Triumphal March," which were part of the Hollins compositions; and the Concert Overture in F Minor which he added at the end of his programme as a last encore. The intermezzo has an exquisite poetry and romance; the "Triumphal March" is brisk, ceremonial, a trifle pompous, but at the same time distinguished by a spontaneous spirit and fire which make it a splendid concert piece. The Concert Overture, in which there is some fine playing on the pedals, calls on the full resources of the organ, and was given a markedly enthusiastic reception.

There are no numbers which might not be specially mentioned with justification, but space prohibits. The audience found an acute pleasure and interest in the improvisation on two themes submitted by Victoria musicians. These themes were played on the organ first by Mr. Edward

Parsons, and after he had memorized them Dr. Hollins sat down and developed a most beautiful arrangement by means of variations. Another of the great episodes in his programme was the Bach Prelude and Fugue in D, as an encore to which he played the G Minor Fugue. There was power and distinction in both these. Other numbers on the programme were the Wesley Andante in F Sharp Minor, Wolskel's "Answer," Watling's daintily precise Minuet Antique, the Turner "Scherzo," and the orchestral magnificent overture to Weber's "Oberon."

BRIGHTLINGHORE, England, Nov. 9.—Sails were introduced as an aid to ploughing in a soil tillers' match near this little seaside resort, of which many of its residents are fishermen as well as farmers. The wind at times aided the horses in dragging the plough along, but at other times puffs blew the implement to one side and spoiled a straight furrow, which hindered the contestant's chance of winning first prize.

Women as well as men participated in the contest, which the judges decided was a great success, but thought there was little possibility of sails ever putting horses or motors out of business when it comes to ploughing.

Former Actor in "Sea Hawk" Scores Another Great Hit in "The Knockout"

Motion picture lovers who have tired of problem plays, psychological studies and the like, and who have been crying for pictures containing melodrama, romance, action and thrills will find all these in "The Knockout," which opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

In this picture one finds love, action, excitement, scenic beauty, pathos and good, wholesome fun. And Milton Sills gives one of the greatest screen performances of his brilliant career. Combine Sills' fight scenes in "The Spoilers," "The Sea Hawk," "As Men Desire," together with his other action scenes in previous pictures and one has some idea of the rapid-fire action of "The Knockout."

"The Knockout" is a screen adaptation of M. D. C. Crawford's novel "The Comeback," which was adapted and produced under the personal supervision of Earl Hudson, who gave to the screen the sensation of the year, "The Lone Wolf." Lambert Hillyer, who directed Sills in "The Spoilers," directed him in this picture.

Romance of Prince and Dancer

Masterpiece Both of Acting and Direction

One of the finest pictures seen here was presented last night at the Dominion Theatre. It is entitled "The Merry Widow."

The production is a splendid piece of workmanship and shows Mae Murray and John Gilbert as co-stars, doing the best work of their varied and brilliant careers. Erich von Stroheim, whose directorial genius immortalized "Foggy Wives," has fulfilled a similar function with "The Merry Widow."

Laid in a mythical Balkan kingdom, the picture reflects all the glamor, fascination and beauty of the continent. The settings are nothing short of exquisite and the coronation sequence, done in natural colors, is of such beauty and splendor that it will long be remembered by all those fortunate enough to see the picture.

The story is replete with surprises, and moves at a pace that keeps the spectator enthralled during every moment of its unfolding.

Playhouse—"Bringing Up Mother."

The events leading up to this episode and those following make "Taming the Western Lassie" a picture tense with excitement, with an enthralling heart interest and ever-present suspense.

The screen offering is "On the Stroke of Three," which will be remembered as "The Man From Ashluna," Henry Payson Dowst's novel, published serially in The Saturday Evening Post, with Madge Bellamy, Kenneth Harlan and Mary Carr playing the feature roles. "On the Stroke of Three" proves a brilliant photo dramatization of the Dowst story.

Musical Version of "The Magistrate" Is Coliseum Attraction

"The Boy," a musical version of Tegner's greatest play, "The Magistrate," with Will Marshall back in the company in the title role, after two weeks' vacation, is the stage attraction at the Coliseum this week.

In addition, the Coliseum is showing the first of a series of big pictures which have been signed up for the winter.

The screen offering is "On the Stroke of Three," which will be remembered as "The Man From Ashluna," Henry Payson Dowst's novel, published serially in The Saturday Evening Post, with Madge Bellamy, Kenneth Harlan and Mary Carr playing the feature roles. "On the Stroke of Three" proves a brilliant photo dramatization of the Dowst story.

Girl Poor But Her Gowns Magnificent at Playhouse Theatre

Magnificent gowns of the latest mode are shown lavishly in "Fifth Avenue Models," Universal-Jewel, starring Mary Philbin, which is now showing at the Playhouse Theatre.

The story is that of a girl, sole support of an unsuccessful artist father, who encounters many agonies of soul by reason of her love for a rich man, who met her in a fashionable modiste's salon. Miss Philbin is supported by a cast that contains some of the best-known names in filmdom, including Norman Kerry, Joseph Swickard, William Conklin, Rosemary Theby, Betty Francisco, Rose Dione and Jean Hershall.

Bans Courtroom Marriages

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 9.—District Judge Honner, who has declined to marry approximately 100 couples since January 1, has announced that he will no longer perform marriage ceremonies in the courtroom. He declared marriages should be contracted under religious influence.

Effect of Gravity

The gravity of the earth varies (owing to curvature) from the equator to the poles, and the Astronomical Branch endeavors to obtain data every year, in places that are well surveyed, in order to make the records satisfactory. The most important item in these investigations is accurate time.

This has to be calculated to a millionth of a second, and to this end a long wave wireless installation has to be set up, in order that time signals from Washington may be recorded, and compared with the records of the local time.

Which are also connected up with recording instruments. One of these clocks is set ten seconds behind the other, so that the two beats only synchronize every so many seconds.

Wireless fans know that the time signals sent out from Washington every day at 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. consist of beats or impulses, one per second, which continue from five minutes prior to the hour, then a pause of five seconds is made and the exact hour is broadcast over the continent.

Basics of Calculations

It will then be seen that when the signals from the two chronometers and the wireless beats synchronize, a neutral space will be registered on the headphones and recorder, which is recorded on Mr. Miller's stopwatch, and forms the basis for his calculations.

There is also a brass pendulum which swings in vacuum, and whose swing is reflected, by means of prisms, across to an instrument, similar to a microscope, in appearance. Looking through this one sees a beam of light projected on a dark screen, and swinging above and below this is another beam which represents the pendulum, when these two beams coincide, Mr. Miller's stopwatch again comes in action, and the time noted. There are altogether some nineteen

Observer From Ottawa Visits Union Bay to Obtain Data on Gravity of Earth

UNION BAY, Nov. 9.—A scientific visitor has just left, after having made this his headquarters for the last week, in the person of Mr. Miller, of the Astronomical Branch of the Interior Department, Ottawa, who has been conducting researches with reference to the gravity of the earth at this point. This is the thirty-ninth in a chain of places visited by Mr. Miller in recent years, and The Colonist correspondent was permitted to inspect his installation and observe his methods.

Future Plans

From Union Bay Mr. Miller is proceeding to Cloverdale, where the department is interested in noting any effects "the Delta" may have in gravity calculations, as land has been steadily deposited by the river. American investigation on the Mississippi seems to indicate that when earth is deposited, as in a delta, some other matter is released from under the surface which

Poles Crush Man

SPokane, Nov. 9.—G. R. Brown, an employee of a pole preserving concern in Yardley, a suburb, was instantly killed today when a load of poles rolled off a flat car and crushed him. He is survived by his widow and four children.

Hundreds Accused Of Sunday Crimes

New Jersey Police Scatter Consternation Among Motorists,
Golfers and Like

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Nov. 9.—
Police throughout Middlesex County took the names of hundreds of persons found violating the old New Jersey blue laws on Sunday. Motorists, in some instances were given summonses for driving their cars and activity of every kind was stopped by police. Theaters, golf clubs, kasoline service stations and restaurants were included in places visited.

The arrests were the outcome of a movement started some weeks ago by the Perth Amboy Ministerial Association when an attempt was made to close down motion picture shows. At the several motion picture theatres operators were arrested and held for the grand jury.

"Just this way, sir," said the courteous clerk in the railway ticket office. "Let me show you some summer guides, entitled 'Where to Go'
and 'When to Go.'"
The man with the modest income shook his head.
"They don't interest me," he sighed. "What I want to know is
'How to Go.'"

Jackson Will Take Cattle Bone Freight

Admiral Oriental Liner Sails for Far Eastern Ports With Capacity Cargo Tomorrow Night

Ship Has Fair Passenger List

When the Admiral Oriental liner President Jackson sails from Victoria for Oriental ports, Wednesday evening, included in the outward cargo of this vessel will be a big shipment of cattle bones, the first to be shipped to the Orient for some time owing to the decline in the market valuation caused by the lapse in popularity of the Chinese game of mah jong. During the peak of that craze all cattle or other animal bones that could be collected were in great demand for the manufacturing of these intricate sets called mah jong, and with the decline substitutes for the use of this material has been celluloid and other materials. For use in the manufacture of tooth brushes, picture frames and other articles the Japanese are now commencing to buy cattle bones.

The President Jackson will take out a capacity cargo of freight, as well as a fair passenger list. Among those on board will be Mrs. H. A. Hawthorne, wife of the manager of the National Trading Company at Kobe; Mrs. J. M. Hewitt, of Victoria; Miss Augusta M. Hultman, a teacher en route to Manila for the United States Board of Education; Miss Doris Fisher, en route to Yokohama; and Mr. T. Okazaki, a Japanese merchant returning to Tokyo.

Steamer Alda in Collision Is Back in San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—The German steamer Alda, which collided with the oil tanker El Segundo thirty miles outside the Golden Gate yesterday afternoon, anchored here last night slightly damaged.

The Alda bound from Seattle to San Francisco steamed into port under its own power. The El Segundo, which left San Francisco for Alaskan ports, reported it was proceeding northward.
